He was admitted to $10,000. The maximum penalty would result in a fine of $10,000.

MITCHELL WANTS TRIAL BY JURY

New York, Nov. 4.—John Mitchell, Vice President of the American Federation of Labor, whose sentence to nine months' imprisonment in the Bucks Store and Range Company's case has been upheld by the United States Court of Appeals, today announced that he would appeal to the Supreme Court. Mitchell has already discussed the situation freely, and has expressed himself as believing that he was only exercising his constitutional rights. He is, however, willing to go to jail in defense of his rights. The matter will undoubtedly be taken up by the convention of the American Federation of Labor, which begins in Toronto on Tuesday. He declared:

"Trial by jury is the traditional and constitutional right of a free people. The agitation against the decision will be of national scope and will be kept up. Meanwhile every legal remedy will be tried to have the sentence set aside."

Local Enthusiasts To See Brown-Yale Game Saturday

Football enthusiasts in this city who yearly make a trip to New Haven to see the Yale-Brown game, are becoming aware of the fact that it is almost impossible to procure seats for the Yale-Princeton game a week from Saturday. The Brown game, outside of the Harvard-Princeton game, is the biggest event in football circles at Old Eli.

WALL STREET TO-DAY.

(Special from United Press.) New York, Nov. 4.—(Opening.)—The market was quiet. Experts say that it was Brown's game. As it was the Yale players thought so much of the game that they sent the ball with which the game was played, and which always goes to the winner of the contest, to Providence. This year Brown has as good a team as last holding Harvard to a 11-0 victory in Pennsylvania to 13-5. The contest always draws a car load of Bridgeporters but this year, it is expected the usual number will be doubled.

MARY GARDEN IS GOING TO WED

But Actress Will Not Tell Name of Her Successful Wooer

(Special from United Press.) New York, Nov. 4.—Mary Garden is going to be married. She says so herself, but she has the unwomanly habit of keeping a secret, for when she landed from the Adriatic to-day she admitted her approaching nuptials but declared no one would know the name of her intended until the wedding had taken place—"If it does take place," she added rather mysteriously.

Attempt Fails To Replace Strikers

(Special from United Press.) London, Nov. 4.—An attempt to recruit 1,000 strike-breakers to replace the striking gas house workers in London, failed. The English workers are afraid that the Italian strike will be marked by great violence and they are not anxious to take the risk. The trade unions are actively combating the scheme.

STREET CLEANING DEPARTMENT WILL KNOW NEW FACES

In the street cleaning department there will undoubtedly be a number of new faces after Jan. 1. The superintendent of streets, John H. Colgan, who has been in charge since the death of Mayor Lee, not only loses his own job but loses the job of superintendent of sewer and cleaning, which his son held during the summer. Colgan is now under Supt. Colgan who are wondering if they will stay with the new superintendent as Joseph Hackett, Edward Rock and Florio Farese.

GAS WORKERS CALL STRIKE

(Special from United Press.) Milan, Italy, Nov. 4.—Employees of the gas works in the cities throughout northern Italy have called a strike and today the police are on duty. Alexandria and Genoa as well as the smaller cities are in darkness last evening and soldiers carrying lanterns were called upon to protect property from hordes of hoodlums. The gas works have been occupied by strong forces of military and there seems to be little chance of a settlement between the troops and the strikers being averted.

The President laughed.

The funeral of Margaret J., wife of John O'Neill, was held from her late residence, 465 Newfield avenue, at 8 o'clock this morning. Mrs. O'Neill had been ill but a short time and her death at the Bridgeport hospital was a great loss to her family and many friends. Conspicuous among the many beautiful floral tributes was a wreath from the United States Navy Company of New Haven. Interment was in St. Laurence cemetery, New Haven.

Adam Haggerty, a life long resident of this city, died at his residence, 133 Golden Hill street, this morning after suffering from a shock sustained on Sunday last. ## MURRAY MAY BE CONN. PRESIDENT

Many Young Men Aspire for Position as Page to the Aldermen.

When the first meeting of the incoming Common Council is held in December Mayor Buckingham will announce his appointments to the various committees and the Aldermen will elect a president and page. The Democratic candidate for the presidency of the board will probably be John H. McMurray, the senior Alderman of the three Democratic Aldermen. The Republicans will nominate a candidate for president who will be the leader of the Republican side of the council during the coming year. The candidates for this place are William E. Primrose of the Ninth district and Robert H. Gould of the First district. The Democratic candidates who are the office of page are cropping out as numerous as peas in a pod. There is James J. Maher who held the position up to a year ago; George Greenup, Philip Healy of Frank street, Thomas Buckley the ball player and member of the South End, Alfred J. Noel of the Tenth district, clerk in the Connecticut National Bank and Henry Kramer of Hamilton street. There are many other young men who would like the position, and although a minor office one of the most trying positions in which an Alderman is placed is in being obliged to refuse a dozen or more energetic young fellows who are anxious to get the position. As each election goes by the number of applicants for this place increases.

Forrester, general superintendent of the National Clerks' Association, were in session from 11 to 12 today with General Manager Samuel Higgins and General Superintendent Pollock of the New Haven road. Although the authority for the rumor cannot be traced it was reported among the clerks following the conference this morning that the committee and General Manager Higgins are about to reach a compromise. "Are you expecting to have the clerks called away from their desks today in case present negotiations are unsatisfactory?" Mr. Forrester was asked. "If called," he replied, "it has not yet been decided that we are going to strike but in case we do I cannot tell whether the walk-out orders will be given today, tomorrow or later. Everything depends on developments and the developments ought not to be long in showing themselves."

HOWLAND'S

Entrances on Main street Fairfield avenue, and Cannon street.

Bridgeport, Conn., Thursday, November 4, 1909.

The Weather—Fair tonight and tomorrow.

Handsome dresses of true value are here to be sold at far far less than that value.

It is an opportunity which can rightly be classed as one of best ever Bridgeport has seen.

There are dresses of all the liked colors, and in all sizes, and in wide variety of impressive styles.

Oddly enough, this good fortune is due to somebody else's ill fortune. A maker with whom the store enjoys close and cordial relations, started out this season with more orders than ever before. He counted upon doing a record business. He deserved to; for his dresses were richer and handsomer than ever they had been before. And he has.

Yet he had some ill luck mixed in with all the good. His factory is located in New York, the very style-center of the continent. He was right in the midst of the rush when along came the Hudson-Fulton celebration. That knocked his plans all awry for it kept his force from working the greater part of the time for ten days. Then came a series of holidays, religious and strictly observed.

The combination of circumstances set him far behind his schedule. He was unable to fill orders as they should be filled. And just when he got ready to ship goods, he received orders not to ship them: his customers had become tired of waiting and he was too late.

This left him with some of his nicest and prettiest dresses on hand when he should have been cleared up. He came to us; told the story. We looked at the dresses; saw that they were fully up to his usual high standard. Then we bought them—bought them so they are to be sold for at least a-third less than real worth.

Dresses that are worth $16.50 to $22.50—$10.

Dresses that are worth $25.00 to $35.00—$15.

And such dresses! All made in handsomest of the new styles. All finely-made and finished with artistic decoration. Some of satin prunella, some of panama, some made with full-tucked woolen skirt and waist of silk jersey with elaborate and tasteful braiding.

And colors are just as beautiful. Delicate wisteria, rich myrtle green, soft-toned reseda, deep navy blue, dainty castor, quiet elephant gray, sedate taupe, handsome mahogany red.

Can't describe the handsome effect that is given by the unique methods of trimmings. Can't describe the style which marks each of the dresses. Can't more than half tell the story of their goodness.

But they are here; and ready; and waiting to tell it in person.

Opportunity is open beginning Friday morning.

Second floor.

THE HOWLAND DRY GOODS CO

Long earrings are in style. Sleeves are long and elaborate. Tiny, wavy "bangs" are again in vogue.

The old-fashioned polonaise is coming back. No gowns fit so tightly as they did last year.

Skirts still grow wider, but they will not flare. Jackets will be short and will button up the side.

Sleeves are all either half-length or three-quarter. Odd settings are a feature of much attractive jewelry.

Floral appears everywhere in wraps, gowns and hats. Most dresses touch the floor, but none of them are long.

Velvet is making up some of the handsomest walking gowns. Princess forms prevail for dinner dresses and evening wear.

White mesh is found in nearly all the face veils. Light, filmy chiffon muffs will be in style for evening affairs.

Gold or silver tissue is used in great favor the coming season. Among the new handbags are those of black moire, beaded with jet.

White fur of every sort and kind will be seen before the holidays set in. Seasonable goods are heavy and soft; brocades and moires are among the favorites.

The plain ribbon, pinned around the head like a surgical bandage is very much in vogue. Bridling still has its part in fashion, but not nearly so freely used as last season.

With the continued vogue for collarless gowns for house wear necklaces will continue to be worn. Fastener buttons in all tones are modish, and buttons are quite as much to the fore as ever.

Many turbans of draped panne velvet are seen; they are to be had in almost every shade of every color.

Half a lemon will remove match marks from paint. To sweeten the refrigerator scrub it out with borax.

Shedding hairs for cake and bread are preferable to tin. Starch is a very good substitute for whitening in washing windows.

Alcohol will remove grease stains unless they are of too long standing. Never use grease or oil of any kind on overhauls; it will ruin the rubber.

Stains can sometimes be removed from wall paper by the application of starch.

Concrete tanks, lined with plates of glass, tightly joined with cement, are taking the place of wooden receptacles in French wine storage houses, as cheaper, more durable and more nearly fireproof.

A patent has been granted a Louisiana man on a plane in which the blade is replaced by a piece of sand paper, which may be adjusted or removed and replaced by a fresh piece by two knobs that screw into the base.

A writer in a British medical journal recently went to great length in the world for its size is the Blackstone. But 43 miles long, it supplies 23,000 horse power to mills in Massachusetts and Rhode Island, 50 for each square mile of its drainage area.

Great Britain's survey of Africa from the Cape to Cairo along the thirtieth meridian, begun many years ago and revived by a bequest from the late Cecil Rhodes, has been carried to a point 72 miles north of the Equator. German engineers are building an experimental railroad five miles long, the cars of which will be supported by balloons, the motive power being supplied by electricity through cables to which they will be attached.

The eight-mile ship canal which is to cut across Cape Cod, Massachusetts, will shorten the distance between Boston and New York nearly 100 miles and will enable vessels to avoid dangerous shoals which have been held responsible for nearly 2,000 wrecks since 1800.

MAN IN ISOLATION. He is of Little Consequence and is a Barrier to Progress. It is not an easy thing for a man to separate himself from the thought and activity and purpose of the community in which he lives and to pursue an isolated, disconnected and selfish part. He can't do it, indeed, and if he tries it he will only reduce himself to a cipher or stumbling block. The community will get on somehow, for it must, but if it has many members of this kind it will be dull, heavy and unprogressive. Man in isolation is of little consequence, next to nothing. His association with others, the inspiration he receives from others, draw out his own powers. "The state," to this day, as Plato conceived it, remains "a product of mind." Out of the action and interaction of currents of mind, affected and even directed by variant views or opinions, comes the whole progress of man, of society, of the human race. We want what Burke described as "that action and counteraction which in the natural and political world, from the reciprocal struggle of discordant powers, draw out the harmony of the universe." The most isolated man cannot separate himself from the situation he lives in. If such isolation were general or could be general it would be the negation of civilization.—Portland Oregonian.

The Missing Part. Landlady—You say the chicken soup isn't good? Why, I told the cook how to make it. Perhaps she didn't catch the idea. Boarder—No, I think it was the chicken she didn't catch.
